From Landscape Conversions to Greener Pastures... See What Carrie Is Up To

Those owners who have been at Brookhollow for 6+ years can attest to the transformation the park has undergone in that timeframe. They know that it has had a lot to do with Carrie Decker, a tough property manager with an excellent eye for design, who ensured time and again the park received the best service from its vendors at the lowest cost. Having made her mark, Carrie felt the need to shift gears and devote time and energy to pursue other growth opportunities and educational goals. However severing ties with Brookhollow wasn't going to work out for a lady who cared so much. Who else knew the condition of each tree in the park and the treatment needed like she does, could pinpoint the location of every irrigation valve when needed, looked after the resident turtles she had nicknamed one by one, and kept count of the Koi living in the pond, as well as a protective eye out for the new born ducks? So, she found a way to do both and stay connected, though in a limited capacity, while pursuing her other goals. A new Property Coordinator has been added to the AyZar team to assist Carrie, giving the park the benefit of an additional hands-on dedicated resource as well as continued leadership. Stay tuned for announcement on the new face to the park. To find out more about Carrie, read Shirin Zarkesh's memo here.
